On [redacted] of [redacted], [redacted] told that he had had a conversation with [redacted] who wrote an earlier book on [redacted] back in the [redacted]s. [redacted] told him personally that when he was investigating the [redacted] case, he had a conversation with [redacted] and when [redacted] told [redacted] that the [redacted] crash was a real thing, [redacted] said "Oh no, you're not going to write that!" and [redacted] said "What? What are you talking about? Yes, of course, I am gonna write that. It was a real event, a real thing, it was ET!" [redacted] said "You're not!", and [redacted] asked [redacted] "Who are you? Who are you working for?" And [redacted] told him "I have always worked for [redacted]. There has never been a time in which I have not worked for the [redacted], and you are not going to say that the [redacted] crash happened," and [redacted] basically said "Up yours!" and he ended up writing his book anyway. That's a story [redacted] said to [redacted] directly. [redacted] had said almost the exact same thing to [redacted] as well. However, on [redacted], I asked the late [redacted] what he thought of [redacted]'s statement re [redacted]'s alleged [redacted] activities. [redacted] told me that [redacted] was fond of playing games and may well have said he worked for the [redacted] to [redacted] who may indeed have believed him. [redacted] certainly during all the years he knew [redacted] had no reason to think that was true. In his [redacted] column re the [redacted] book and [redacted] movie [redacted], [redacted] referred to [redacted]'s [redacted] presentation at the [redacted] in [redacted] which had caused a lot of consternation at the time. It made him quite angry listening to it then because he and [redacted] had worked closely finding witnesses to [redacted] (62) in the year and half after he was the first to speak to [redacted] about [redacted] in [redacted]. They also dug into [redacted] after the original roll of film which contained [redacted] was received in [redacted] by [redacted] who worked with [redacted] and whom [redacted] had brought together with [redacted]. That said, [redacted] told me he did NOT tell [redacted] it was OK to release counterfeit documents! He did not disapprove of the release of partial versions of [redacted] in the hope of luring anybody else who had received supposed [redacted] to put forward what they received to see if they matched.
